Albion House

The plot of land on which 73 Newton Road now stands was purchased by John Harbottle in 1851 and has been in the Harbottle family ever since. The name Albion House first appears in 1890 and it was from here that the joinery business flourished before it moved to the Station Road premises in the 1930s. Later a prosperous chicken farming operation was housed in the old workshop and Theodore Harbottle ran a cycle shop and Landrover dealership from the front shop. 3 petrol pumps sat in the small forecourt for many years until the demise of the business in the early 1980s when Albion House reverted to domestic use. Sadly the house is now (2011) up for sale and the name Harbottle seems about to be erased from this once noble property
